USA Junior Freestyle Team seeks to repeat 2017 team title at Junior World Championships in Slovakia

The United States is sending a strong men's freestyle lineup to the 2018 Junior World Championships in Trnava, Slovakia, Sept. 17-23. The squad looks to repeat the 2017 Junior Men's Freestyle Team's championship run, which was clinched over Russia.

Leading the Junior freestyle squad are 2017 Junior World champions Daton Fix of Oklahoma at 57 kg and Gable Steveson of Minnesota at 125 kg, who were critical to last year's team championship, which was the first since 1984.

Fix won a World title at 57 kg after a dominant tournament in Tampere, Finland, for his first World gold. Prior to that, Fix had claimed Junior bronze in 2016 and Cadet bronze in 2015. In 2014, Fix competed in the Youth Olympic Games, where he earned silver.

Earlier this summer, Fix went through the Senior World Team Trials process. He took second to two-time World Team member Tony Ramos at the U.S. Open, but bounced back at the World Team Trials Challenge Tournament one month later, defeating Ramos in two matches, 4-1 and 10-3, to earn a spot in Final X.

Fix finished the process as No. 2 on the National Team ladder, falling to 2017 World silver medalist Thomas Gilman in two matches at Final X in Lincoln in June.

Because he was a past Junior World Team member, placed top-three at the 2018 U.S. Open and competed in Final X, Fix was granted a special wrestle-off for the 57 kg Junior World spot.

To clinch his third-straight bid to the Junior World Championships, Fix defeated World Team Trials champion Brandon Courtney, 11-0 and 10-0, in the wrestle-off that was featured during the USMC Cadet and Junior National Championships in Fargo, N.D., in July.

The 2018 Junior Worlds will mark the sixth time Fix has represented the U.S. at an age-group World Championships. He wrestled at Cadet Worlds in 2014 and 2015, Junior Worlds in 2016 and 2017 and U23 Worlds in 2017.

When he returns to the U.S., Fix will begin his redshirt freshman season at Oklahoma State.

Steveson is seeking his fourth-consecutive age-group World title in as many attempts. Steveson, a freshman at Minnesota, claimed Cadet World championships in 2015 and 2016. In 2017, he forwent his final season of Cadet eligibility and bumped up to the Junior level to win the Junior crown at 120 kg as a 17-year-old.

His poise and maturity in the gold-medal bout crucial in determining the team race as Russia had made it close, going into the event's final bout. Steveson took out Iran's Naeim Hassanzadeh, 5-1, to seal the title for USA.

This summer, he continued to show that he is a young phenom as he took fourth at the U.S. Open, facing several accomplished and veteran athletes and followed that performance up with a third-place finish at the Senior World Team Trials Challenge Tournament. That same weekend, he also won the Junior World Team Trials.

Another World champion in the mix is 79 kg representative Aaron Brooks, who won gold at the Cadet World Championships last summer in Athens, Greece. Brooks, who was an alternate in 2017, competed in the event after No. 1 Travis Wittlake went down with an injury in the weeks prior.

A product of Hagerstown, Md., Brooks currently trains at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., under highly accomplished athlete and coach Kevin Jackson. Brooks is a three-time Fargo champion and a 2018 UWW Junior Freestyle Nationals champion.

Four other wrestlers will return to the World stage as USA representatives, including Jacob Warner at 92 kg, Domonick Demas at 65 kg, Joshua Saunders at 61 kg and Brady Berge at 70 kg.

All four will make their Junior debuts for the U.S. men's freestyle team next week in Trnava.

Warner, a redshirt freshman for Iowa, competed at the 2016 Cadet World Championships in Tbilisi, Georgia, where he won a World bronze medal.

University of Oklahoma sophomore Dom Demas heads to his fourth World Championships, after top-10 finishes at the 2014 and 2015 Cadet World Championships and a trip to the 2017 Junior World Championships. All of his previous World experiences were Greco-Roman competitions.

This summer Demas took second at the Junior Greco World Team Trials and the U23 Freestyle World Team Trials.

At 61 kg, Joshua Saunders, a product of St. Louis, Mo., travels to his second World Championships of the summer, after a top-10 performance in July at the Cadet World Championships in Zagreb, Croatia.

Saunders finished third at the UWW Junior Freestyle Nationals and went on to take third at the Junior World Team Trials. When Junior Trials champion Austin Gomez pulled out of the tournament due to injury, Saunders was named the replacement.

2015 Cadet World Team member and Penn State wrestler Brady Berge returns to the World stage, competing for the United States at 70 kg. Berge finished second at UWW Junior Nationals, before defeating eventual 2018 Junior Pan American champion Austin O'Connor, two matches to one, in the finals of the Junior World Team Trials in May.

Making their international debuts next week Mekhi Lewis at 74 kg, Lou Deprez at 86 kg and Zach Elam at 97 kg.

Lewis is a redshirt freshman at Virginia Tech, who took fifth at the UWW Junior Nationals before storming through the 74 kg bracket at the Junior Trials to win a spot on the Junior World Team.

Elam was the Junior Trials runner-up, taking second to 2017 Cadet World champion Daniel Kerkvliet. Just earlier this week, Elam, a true freshman at Mizzou, was named to the 2018 Junior World Team, after Kerkvliet suffered an injury that is keeping him from Worlds.

Rounding out the team is Deprez, a Binghamton wrestler who won both the Trials and UWW Junior Nationals.

The freestyle portion of the competition will take place Sept. 21-23.

WOMEN'S FS PREVIEW

U.S. women's freestyle Junior World Team is loaded with talent and experience

The U.S. is sending several experienced women's freestyle athletes to the 2018 Junior World Championships next week in Trnava, Slovakia.

The women's squad features a pair of past Cadet World champions, including 2018 Cadet World champion Macey Kilty at 68 kg and 2015 Cadet World champion Ronna Heaton at 55 kg.

Kilty is fresh off of her World title performance, taking the 69 kg gold medal at the 2018 Cadet World Championships in Zagreb, Croatia, in July. Kilty breezed through the field, collecting two falls, one tech fall and a dominant decision, which came in the finals.

Kilty's World title came one year after she fell short of making the Cadet World Team in 2017.

In 2016, she made her international debut at the Cadet World Championships, where she won a bronze medal.

In addition to her World medals, the Wisconsin native owns gold medals from the 2017 Cadet Pan American Championships and Cadet Klippan Lady Open. Kilty is also a four-time Fargo champion, winning her most recent one in July, just one week after the 2018 Cadet Worlds.

Similar to Kilty, Heaton won her first international medal in her Worlds debut with a gold in 2015. The next year, Heaton returned to the Cadet World stage and finished with a silver medal.

Her trip to Slovakia will mark her fourth-straight Worlds appearance as she also competed at the 2017 Junior Worlds in Tampere, Finland.

Over the last two seasons, Heaton has been representing the U.S. on international tours at the Senior level. She took bronze and silver at the 2017 and 2018 Dave Schultz Memorial International, respectively. She added a pair of bronze medals from the Outstanding Ukrainian Memorial and the Bill Farrell International earlier this year.

Nationally, the three-time Fargo champion placed at the Senior U.S. Open and finished third at the Senior World Team Trials Challenge Tournament.

Two-time Cadet World medalist Alleida Martinez will suit up for the U.S. at 50 kg, the lightest weight.

Martinez, a product of Selma, Calif., won collected silver at the 2015 Cadet World Championships and bronze at the same event in 2016.

In May, she won her first UWW Junior Women's National title, earning her a spot on the 2018 Junior World Team. Martinez, who begins her freshman year at Menlo this fall, is also the U23 World Team alternate at 50 kg.

Returning to the Junior World Championships is WCWA All-American for McKendree Brenda Reyna at 59 kg, who finished eighth at the 2016 Junior Worlds.

Earlier this summer, Reyna competed at the Junior Pan American Championships in Fortaleza, Brazil, where she came away with silver.

WOMEN'S FS PREVIEW

The Washington native has proven that she is a threat at the older age groups, as well, producing runner-up finishes at the 2018 U23 World Team Trials and 2018 Senior World Team Trials Challenge Tournament.

Competing for the Red, White and Blue at 57 kg is Alex Hedrick, who has surprised many this year.

After gold-medal performances at the U.S. Open and Senior World Team Trials Challenge Tournament, Hedrick earned a bid to Final X to face off against World and Olympic champion Helen Maroulis for the 57 kg spot on the Senior World Team. The series was postponed because of a Maroulis injury and will take place in early October.

During the college season, Hedrick completed her freshman year for Simon Fraser with a second-place finish at the WCWA National Championships, falling short to her teammate Dominique Parrish. Hedrick took third at the U23 World Team Trials just weeks later.

Hedrick, originally from California, will wrestle in her first World Championships in Slovakia.

Two 2017 Cadet World Team members have made the bump up to the Junior division, counting Alisha Howk at 53 kg and Alexandria Liles at 62 kg. Both are also past Fargo champions.

Liles is making her third trip to the World Championships, with two trips to Cadet Worlds. This season, Liles won silver at the Bill Farrell International and went on to pick up All-American honors at the Senior U.S. Open.

Howk lives in River Falls, Wisc., where she trains with Kilty under highly accomplished coach Kevin Black.

Representing the United States at 65 kg is Jayden Laurent, a 2018 Fargo champion and 2017 Junior Pan Am champion.

Laurent is one of USA's "must-watch" athletes as she has competed in and excelled in multiple age divisions this year. She took silver at the Bill Farrell International before taking third at the U.S. Open. Additionally, she was second at the U23 World Team Trials and Senior World Team Trials Challenge Tournament.

Completing the team are college stars Alyvia Fiske at 72 kg and Dymond Guillford at 76 kg. Fiske, a student-athlete at Simon Fraser, took fourth at the U.S. Open, and Guillford, who competes for Missouri Baptist, took fourth at the 2017 WCWA Championships.

The women's freestyle portion of the competition will take place Sept. 19-21.

World Champions Bey and Schultz lead U.S. Greco into Junior Worlds in Slovakia

The U.S. Junior Greco-Roman World Team will kick off the 2018 Junior World Championships for Team USA next week in Trnava, Slovakia, Sept. 17-19. The team is led by three past World medalists and features several other skilled athletes.

Making his third-straight trip to the Junior World Championships is Kamal Bey, who, in 2017, became the first U.S. Greco-Roman Junior World champion since 1999, winning the 75 kg bracket in Tampere, Finland.

This year, as the UWW weights shifted in order to go to 10 World Championship weights, Bey will wrestle at 77 kg. Waiting for him in the bracket are the other three medalists from last year's 75 kg field.

For the last couple of years, Bey has been one of USA's fiercest Greco competitors. In the early years of his elite career, 20-year-old Bey has won two Senior U.S. Opens, represented the U.S. at four age-group World Championships and collected multiple Senior international medals.

Last year, Bey did double duty, wrestling at Junior Worlds as well as the inaugural U23 World Championships. This year, he carries the same burden, but this time, in addition to Junior Worlds, Bey will represent the U.S. at the Senior World Championships in Budapest, Hungary, in October.

Bey isn't the only World champion heading to Slovakia with the U.S. Joining him is 2017 Cadet World champion Cohlton Schultz, who won the first Cadet Greco World title for the U.S. since 1997.

Similar to Bey, Schultz is doing back-to-back years with two World Championship appearances. Last year, prior to winning his Cadet World title, Schultz competed at the Junior World Championships. This year, he will travel to Bucharest, Romania, for the U23 Worlds in November.

Overall, Schultz is a two-time Cadet World Teamer, two-time Junior World Teamer and a 2018 U23 World Team member.

Since last year, Schultz, who won his Cadet World title at 110 kg, has put on 20 kg of muscle and will compete at 130 kg.

Making his sixth-consecutive trip to an age-group World Championships is 2016 Junior World bronze medalist Taylor LaMont. At last year's Junior Worlds, LaMont finished fifth in the World, falling in the bronze-medal match.

LaMont has suited up for the U.S. three times at the Cadet level (2013, 2014, 2015) and three times at the Junior level (2016, 2017, 2018). In Trnava, he will wrestle at 60 kg.

A sophomore at Utah Valley University, LaMont is a five-time Fargo champion and claimed bronze at the 2018 U.S. Open.

GRECO-ROMAN PREVIEW

---

Two wrestlers will had to Worlds for the second time, including Peyton Omania at 67 kg and Brady Koontz at 55 kg.

Omania finished 11th at the 2016 Cadet World Championships, while Koontz did not place at Cadet Worlds in 2015.

Earlier this summer, Omania, who is attending Michigan State, won UWW Junior Greco-Roman Nationals and Fargo Junior Greco-Roman titles.

A freshman at Ohio State, Koontz was a 2017 Junior Greco Fargo runner-up to seal his fifth Fargo All-American honor.

Alston Nutter, a wrestler at the Northern Michigan Olympic Training Site, has a significant amount of international experience at only 19 years old. He owns a bronze medals from the 2017 Junior Greco-Roman Austrian Open and also tabbed top-five finishes at the 2016 Malar Cup and 2017 Klippan Cup. Nutter will wrestle in his first World Championships at 63 kg in Slovakia.

Junior Greco Fargo champions Tyler Dow (72 kg) of University of Wisconsin and Andrew Berreyesa (82 kg) of Cornell will make their World debuts as well as Barrett Hughes of Oklahoma State at 97 kg and Chad Porter of Arizona State at 87 kg.

The Greco-Roman portion of the competition will take place Sept. 17-19.
